

Julie M. Keller, M.D., named Director of Orthopaedic Trauma at Hackensack University Medical Center

Monday November 14, 2016 MAYWOOD, NJ-- Restoration Orthopaedics physician Julie Keller, M.D., has been appointed Chief of Orthopaedic Trauma at Hackensack University Medical Center. As Director, Dr. Keller will lead initiatives to improve quality of care for patients entering HackensackUMC's Emergency and Trauma Center with traumatic injuries that require orthopedic evaluation and surgery. Hackensack University Medical Center is a designated level II Trauma Center—and the only trauma center in Bergen County.

"I am honored and excited to take on the role of Director of Orthopaedic Trauma," says Dr. Keller. "My goal for patients, whether I am meeting them at our Restoration Orthopaedic practice, or in the Trauma Center at HackensackUMC, is to deliver safe and effective care when they need it most."

Dr. Keller is an orthopaedic trauma and post-trauma reconstruction specialist. Dr. Keller's clinical focuses are on the care of acute traumatic injuries, including polytrauma, periarticular fractures and pelvic and acetabular injuries. In addition, she treats the complex sequelae and long term disabilities associated with these injuries, such as non-unions, malunion, functional deficits and pain.

If you have suffered a traumatic injury and are seeking the expertise of a fellowship-trained Orthopaedic Trauma surgeon, call 201-226-0145 to make an appointment with Restoration Orthopaedics.
